Participant was up when I arrived. He was excited to go on a group outing with Focus today. We are going to the movies and out to eat afterwards. We discussed briefly what to do if there was a fire at the movies. He was able to tell me to look for the fire exits and move as far away from the theater as possible. While at the restaurant, he became upset but was able to talk to me about it in a calm manner without any prompts. We spent most of the day with friends socializing and having a good time.

Participant woke up in an anxious mood today. He wanted to go fishing as soon as he got up at 9. With a couple of verbal prompts, he completed his chores before we left. We went to the park around 10:30. We packed a picnic to have for lunch while we were there fishing. After lunch, we fished a little longer then packed everything up in the car and walked the trails for exercise before heading home. Once we left the park and went home, he wanted to relax the remainder of the shift. He watched TV and played video games in his room until I left.
